800 Attended Democratic Rally At Holiday Lake

Tuesday was "Democratic Day" in Appomattox and Buckingham, as a throng of 800 attended the first annual Young Democratic barbecue and rally at beautiful Holiday Lake. A galaxy of political leaders from all sections of the Old Dominion attended the event, hailed as the largest political rally in this section in the past decade.

After enjoying the musical entertainment of the crack 45-piece American Legion drum and bugle corps from Lynchburg, the crowd gathered before a speakers' stand nestling in a grove near the 147-area lake, to hear addresses from many of the distinguished guests. W. M. Abbitt, president of the Appomattox Young Democratic Club, presided. Calvin H. Robinson, fourth district chairman, presented visiting Young Democratic leaders. Senator Moses introduced other party leaders present. J. P. Andrews, in charge of the federal development in the lake area, drew applause when he announced that a wire received that morning brought news that funds had been made available to finish work on the project.

Senator William M. Tuck, of Halifax was presented for a few remarks, following which Harry Griffin of Buckingham introduced Congressman A. Willis Robertson, of Lexington. Mr. Robertson lauded the Democracy of the Fourth District, and praised the progress in conservation work made by the present national administration.

Judge Thomas W. Ozlin was presented by Delegate John B. Boatwright. Speaking on the theme of "True Liberalism," Mr. Oslin, who is a member of the State Corporation Commission, launched an attack on loose financial policies, and urged Virginia Democracy to rally around the leadership of those seeking to guide "from within the party" its policies toward liberalism without reckelessness.

Mr. Oslin declared that many of the current divisions in the Democratic party involved "what is and what is not liberalism." He said that true liberals were those who have attempted to uphold the Constitution of the United States and the financial soundness of the nation. He attacked any past or future attempts to "purge" from the party those who were, in reality, its true liberals, in favor of radicals, and "political crack-pots."

Byrd Receives Applause

United States Senator Harry Flood Byrd was introduced by Geo. P. Abbitt. Mr. Abbitt acted for Gov. S. L. Ferguson, whose illness prevented her attendance.

After thanking Mr. Abbitt for "one of the best and most appreciated introductions I have ever received," Senator Byrd recalled memories of his boyhood days spent at Appomattox, and paid a glowing tribute to the late Samuel Lewis Ferguson.

Admitting that there are existing differences in the Democratic party, he pleaded for harmony and said, "we can have differences and still have a Democratic party. He declared that the party had given the nation "five great presidents, including the present leader, Franklin D. Roosevelt." He said that these five great presidents would have met problems of the nation in different ways. "Surely Andrew Jackson, who was the only president to pay off the entire national debt, would not have met these problems by spending." Yet, he added, Democracy has been great because it had not permitted internal differences to cause its wreck, and "no man, no matter how great he is, has a right to say who will be a Democrat."

Taking a jab at John L. Lewis, C. I. O. leader, Senator Byrd drew applause when he scored Lewis' recent attack on vice-president John N. Garner. Said Senator Byrd, "In my long career in Virginia and national public life I have often differed with others, but I have never challenged either their character or their sincerity." He said Lewis tried to stir up class hatred by lambasting Garner and said "I know of no purer man in his public life than the vice-president."

Declaring that the true problem of the nation was to stop class hatred and labor for internal peace and prosperity. He expressed his faith in American industry to solve the acute problem of employment and that "business and not government" must provide jobs for all.

Following the address of Senator Byrd, barbecue and brunswick stew was served. There was enough for all, and over 150 gallons of stew and 300 pounds of minced barbecue served in over 1,200 sandwiches, was consumed! One way to estimate the crowd was that such items as trays and plates barely sufficed even though 1,000 of each did been provided, and the only item that became exhausted was spoons, of which the committee ha dover 700.

For the speaking, many sat in parked automobiles, being able to hear the proceedings through the amplifiers. Four state policemen acted to handle the traffic problem.

Many new members were secured during the day by the Young Democratic Clubs, swelling the Appomattox membership to nearly 500, Buckingham membership to 100, Farmville to 48, and Cumberland to 25.

Among the distinguished Virginia Democrats attending the Young Democratic barbecue Tuesday were: Senator Harry Flood Byrd Congressman A. Willis Robertson Attorney-General A. P. Staples E. R. Combs, Peter Saunders, John Wicker, of Richmond
